Sandy Sandor

Dear "Sand" -
 I'm really gonna miss you because you're so funny and peppy and always brightened up my many, many blue moods.
 How can you forget all our an-mail diles, the long, breath-run to either gym or guidance at far code?
 You are a rare person with a rare gift. The something few girls have - you're why I know, to be yourself and that's why I know.
 your guy will be extra special, I know.
 I've waited so long and so patiently.
 All our activities are memories now because you've been a memory for us
 And I hope I will be more than a memory for us
 Just have to keep in touch.
 Remember your medical editor,
 All my love,
 Judy Funch
 July, '60

Sandy,
We have been friends for a long time and I hope our friendship
continues for a life time.
Best of Luck and happiness in the world because you deserve all of it.

Always,
Sharon

Changing times

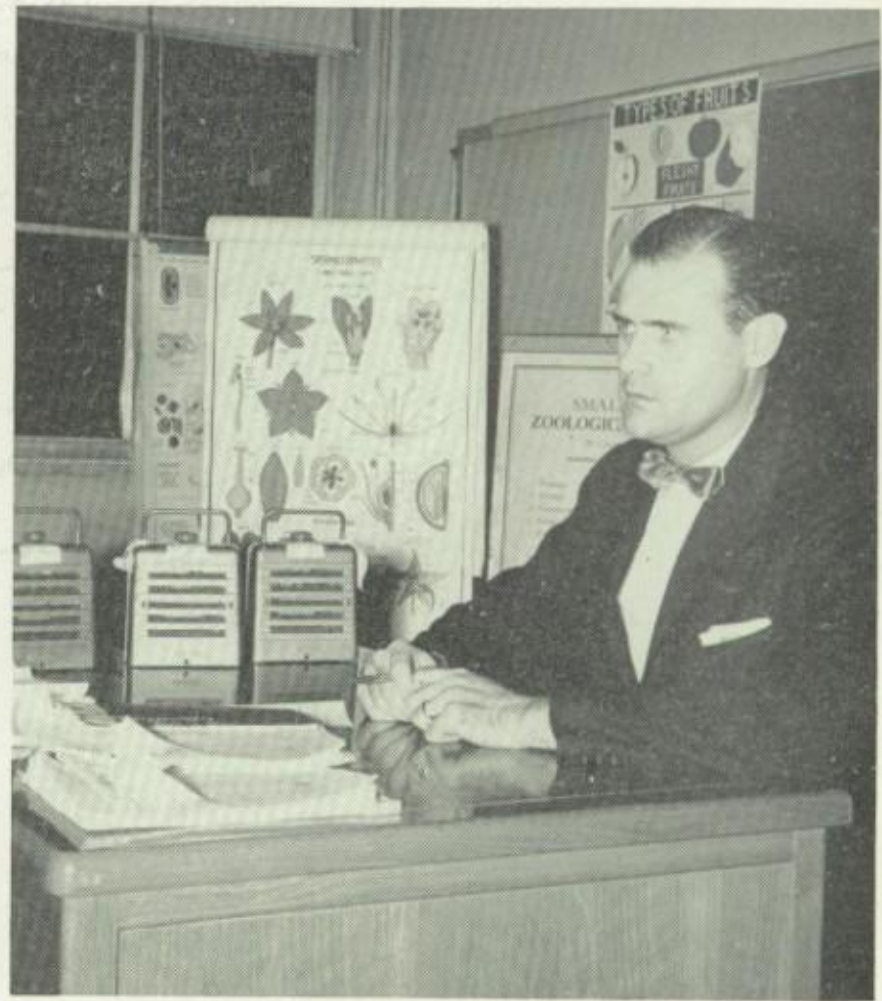

Tom Wilmer employs an intense interest in the chemistry experiment he is performing on the night of Open House.

Round the clock, Parma-ites, young and old, occupied Parma Senior High. Students with explorative minds gathered at PSH in order to channel their thinking and wide ranging interests through specific courses, and many adults sought new fields of knowledge at night classes. Student awards and honors at the close of the year proved that time and effort directed toward learning were not spent in vain. PSH-ers realized that their accomplishments during their days at Parma laid the ground for the future.

Band member Bob Regan practices his tuba during a free period in one of the many music practice rooms at PSH.

"So much to do, so many places to go, but not enough time" was an expression commonly heard in student conversations. Interest and initiative were high, when leisure time was exhausted in activities. Through these, pupils displayed their skills, worked as a part of a team, or probed their own curiosities. Activities offered times for new experiences and opportunities, because diversity was always found within these groups

Leisure times of

"La Hora de Como Estais," the Spanish "Howdy Doody" portion of the Language Assembly, gave us many laughs.

Banquets, guest speakers, or field trips to industrial plants, colleges, or theaters were among the wide variety of outstanding events afforded to pupils through some extra-curricular groups. Besides the many clubs there was the athletic side of activity in which league competition was closely followed by young and old admirers of the Redmen. All in all, throughout the year, activities provided many happy hours for PSH students.

Memorable, carefree times

Bob Redick shows Donna Belfi and Judy Mauser that driving to school is even more enjoyable in a Volkswagen.

One of the most memorable phases of the school year was student life. There was definitely an unexplainable sentimentalism about it. It included times spent with new and old friends at football games, canteens, or special events like the All School Party. It brought memories of the impact of the first day of school after a fun-packed summer of "easy-living." It was the warm feeling of being with the members of a class play;

the spell cast on the audience by the rapturous silence after a concert;
 the clamor and enthusiasm ringing in the cafeteria during lunch periods;
 the anxiety in keeping the "latest gossip" from one's best friend til after study hall.

Of course, we didn't forget the sense of pride we felt when we sang the Alma Mater
 during assemblies. "Such times

Arlene Latanick and Joe Hagen nervously glance at the clock and its racing hands ticking off the hours to graduation.

When our last year at PSH began in September, we could only dream of the wonderful times that lay ahead. We thought that this one year of our lives would last indefinitely. But with the passing of weeks and months, we began to realize that it, like our other years at PSH, would quickly run its course. So we began to turn our dreams into realities. We became active in our favorite clubs; we loyally supported our Redmen. We vividly remember "The Robe," our class play, and a wonderful senior prom. As we donned caps and gowns in June, we could only wonder how months could pass so swiftly.

Class of '60 pledges "Loyalty, eternally"

September '57 found us, the usual batch of bewildered sophomores, dashing through the halls in search of the elusive "glass-covered passageway." We failed in this attempt but found instead the hard assignment that faced us—three years' time to form ourselves into an efficient working unit that could live up to the standards set by past PSH classes. As juniors we proved that we could attain our goals by blending cooperation and talent to produce Parma's first musical, "Finian's Rainbow." We proudly realized that "Class of '60" was more than a name tag.

Led in our senior year by President John Holden, Vice-President Jim Zavocky, Secretary Veronica Dempsey, Treasurer Kathy Kitzel, and Adviser Mr. Thomas Dunford, we continued to add to our impressive string of firsts. Once more we broke dramatic precedence at PSH with our Biblical production of "The Robe." We also saw many changes on campus, including enlarged library facilities which replaced the legendary glass-covered passageway. All too soon we realized that it was time to relinquish our honored position as leaders to Parma's competent underclassmen.

Our final appearance as the Class of 1960 at Commencement exercises in the Public Auditorium is impressive.

Commencement site is Public Auditorium

Early in our senior year it became apparent that the size of our class would necessitate several major changes in graduation plans. We broke tradition by moving the ceremony from the Music Hall to the Public Auditorium and also by changing the night from Thursday to Saturday.

The morning rehearsal for the solemn occasion found us in a not-so-solemn mood. But as the curtains parted that night, and we looked out over the vast audience, we felt a new and different emotion—a unique mixture of sadness and anticipation. As we patiently waited our turn to receive our coveted diploma, we suddenly realized that we would never see many of our classmates again. Yet we were looking forward to accepting the challenge that lay ahead of us.

As we rose to sing the alma mater for the final time as students of PSH, we realized the real meaning of our pledge of "loyalty, eternally." Then with the turning of our tassels, we became members of a strange new world—ALUMNI.

Marilyn Schwartz, Andrea Migala, Rich Larsen, Tillmon Simmons, and Judy Link are Class of 1960's valedictorians.

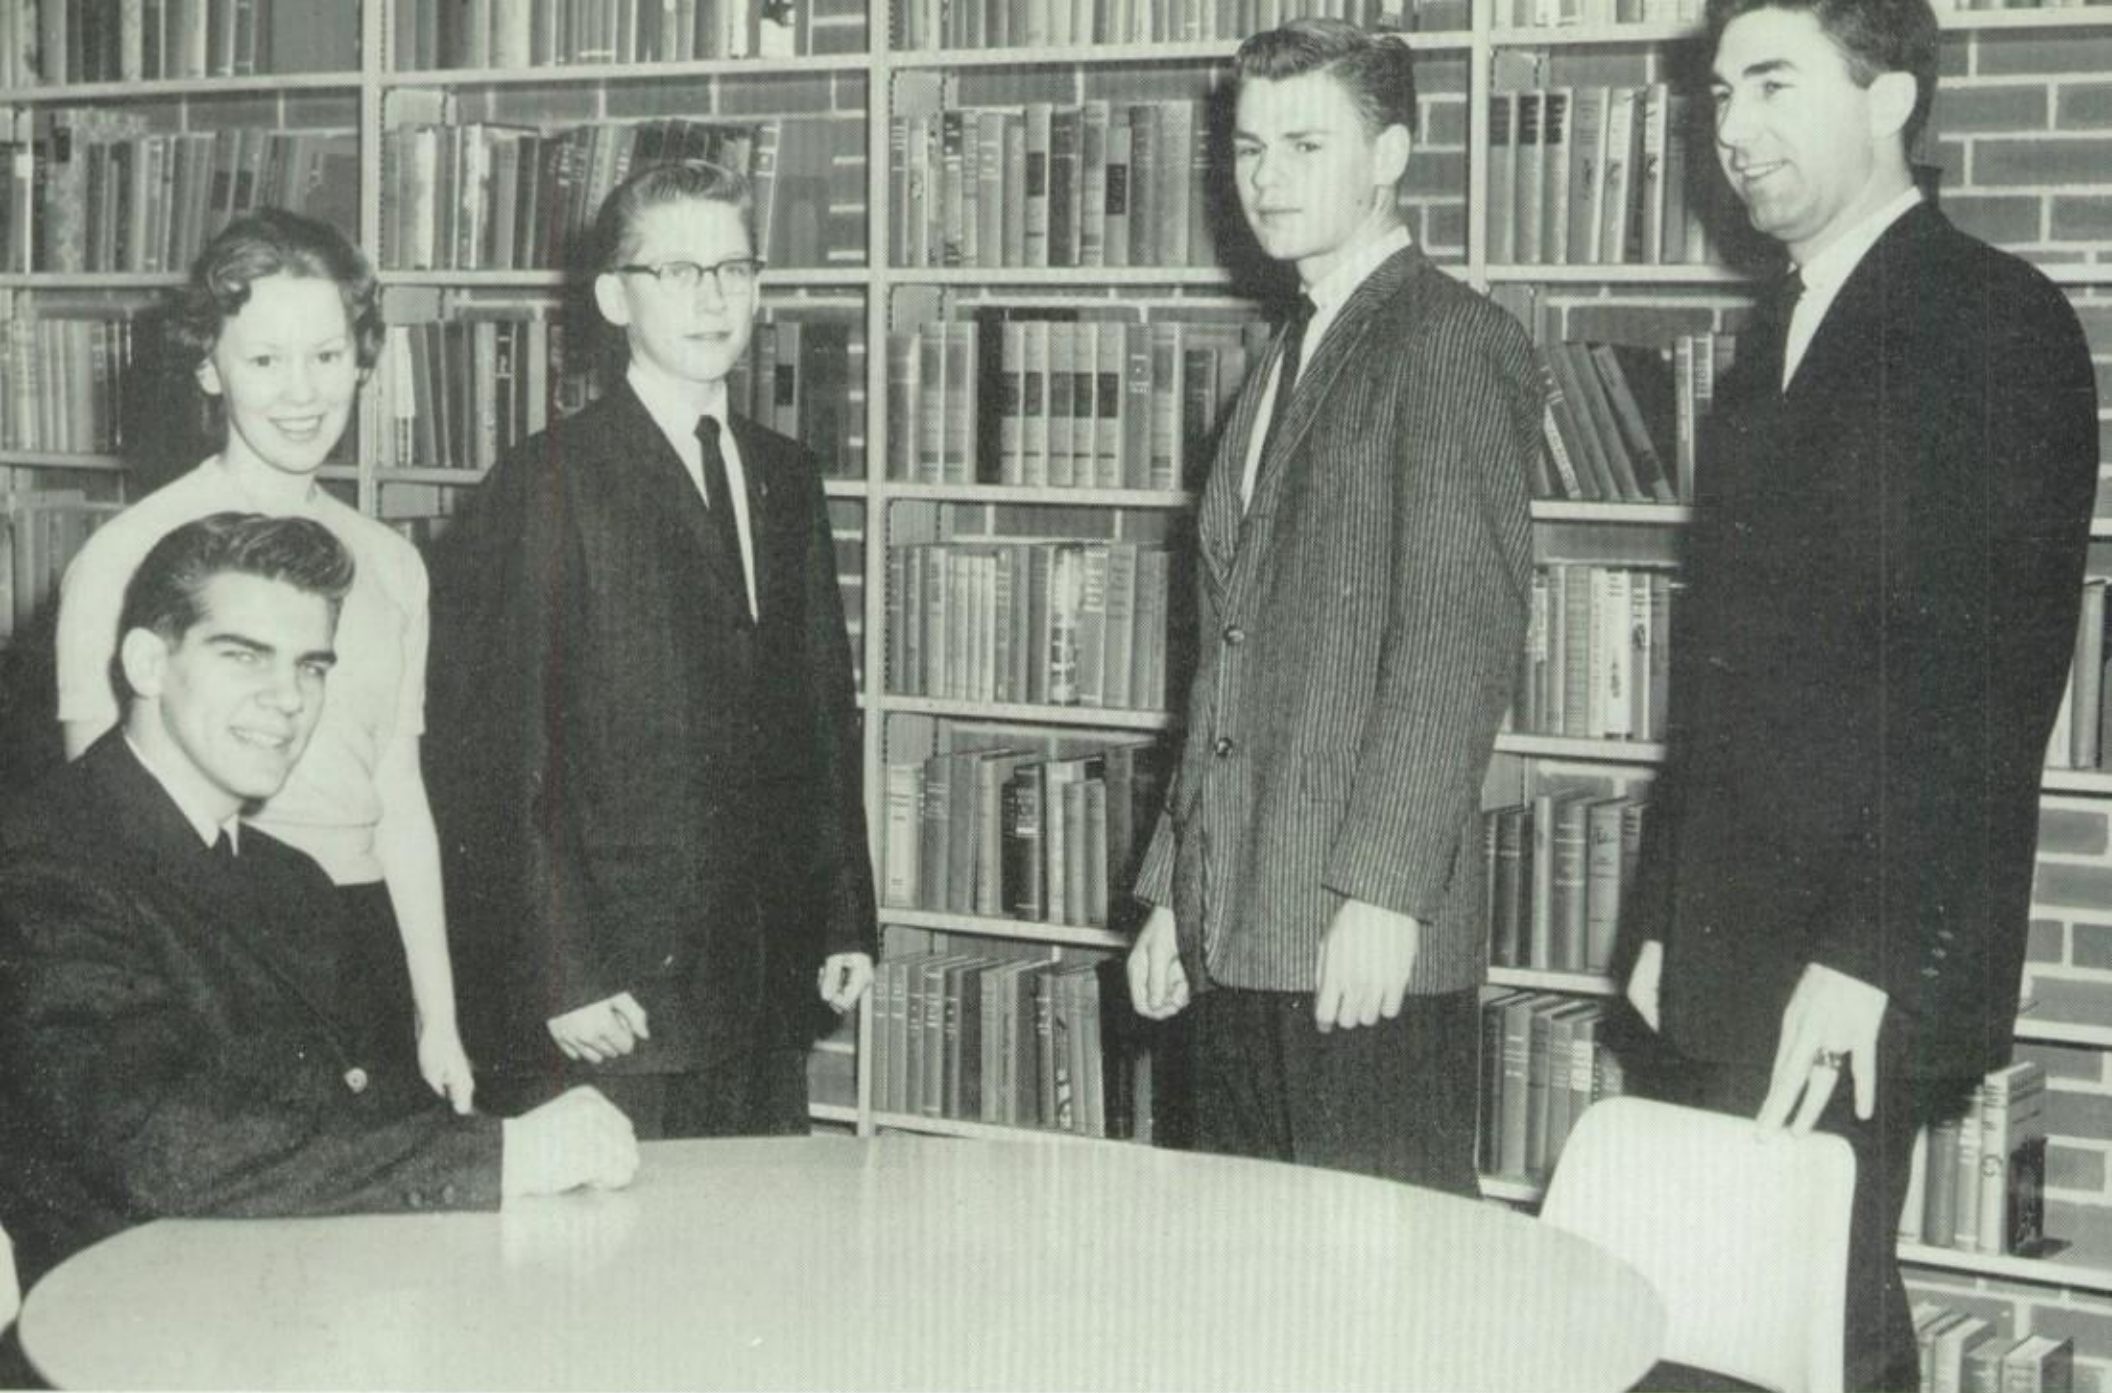

MR. JAMES R. JUSTICE

In Memoriam

On the Monday following Thanksgiving, members of the Senior Class were saddened by the news of the sudden death of their class adviser, Mr. James R. Justice. This came as a shock to the faculty and students, for Mr. Justice had apparently recovered completely from the heart surgery he had undergone the previous year. A valuable member of the faculty, he had been teaching in the social studies department but had previously taught journalism and advised the Hi-Spot. William James wrote: "The great use of a life is to spend it for something that outlasts it." This quotation describes the life of a man whose death came as a great loss to Parma High, but whose accomplishments during life did not pass away with him. His friendliness and sincerity won him many admirers, who will not forget the courage he showed during his convalescence, the service he rendered to the school, or the over-all influence his life cast on many.

We juniors hurried through each day and wished it contained a few extra hours in which we could complete all our work. The clock made us rush to finish our assignments. While writing our first term paper, we combated the pressures of time. We met them again when we were preparing our class assembly and play. Under the direction of our officers, President Roger Powell, Vice-president Sam Zickel, Secretary Kathy Ivey, and Treasurer Denny Tischler, and our adviser Mr. Bright, we won the Christmas window display contest and held our prom in the spring. Time played an important part in our year.

Packing Thanksgiving baskets is a pleasant task for sophs Greg Steigerwald, Carl Steidl, Sandy Stunneck, and Arlene Stanonik.

In September, 1208 confused sophomores wandered into the maze of halls at PSH. These sophs made their social debut on September 26 at the Sophomore Mixer. Led by their officers—Jim Cody, president; Gail Johnson, vice-president; Jan Chaffin, secretary; and Vince Strazzo, treasurer; and advised by Mr. Broski—they staged a successful assembly on March 17 and held a memorable class dance on May 21. JV and intramural sports attracted the athletic sophs. Some joined the many clubs, while others served as office pages, movie ushers, and hall guards. For the sophs, these were unforgettable times!

big challenge to sophomore English students

Mr. Needham, Mrs. Brashear, Mr. Lesniak, Miss Baesel, and Mrs. Stoddard relax in the faculty room in the new addition.

The passing of time brought many changes to PSH this year. The addition of a larger library created space for more books and magazines. Language students utilized the pilot language lab, while teachers gathered to grade papers or just to chat in their new lounge. This fall Parma students viewed closed circuit television for the first time. Dramatics and college algebra were among the additions made to the large number of courses available at Parma High. Rapid growth in enrollment will undoubtedly bring more changes to PSH in the future.

Board of Education plans new high school

Mr. Paul W. Briggs, Superintendent of the Parma Public Schools, includes among his many qualifications an extensive background of training and experience in education. He holds a BA degree from Western Michigan University and an MA degree from Michigan State University and has taken graduate work at four universities. His large number of interests include community and church events as well as educational activities.

Under the leadership of Mr. Briggs, the Board of Education has developed Parma's school system to meet the educational demands of a rapidly growing community. This group of civic-minded men meets bi-monthly to make plans for recruiting teachers, maintaining a notable program of instruction, and providing for adequate teaching facilities. This year the Board made plans for new elementary, junior, and senior high schools as well as additions to existing buildings. The educational improvements they plan make the Parma Public Schools a prominent system in Ohio.

On behalf of Parma Senior High, Mr. Bassett accepts the Lake Erie League football trophy at the annual banquet.

Dedicating his life to service in the Parma schools has been Mr. Bassett's primary aim during the past twenty-eight years. Since 1932, when he came to Parma as athletic coach and history teacher, he has endeavored to provide the best for Parma youth. Mr. Bassett, who graduated from South High in Cleveland, holds an AB from Baldwin-Wallace and earned his MA at Western Reserve University. In 1938 he became principal of Parma Schaaf High School. He served on the building planning committee of Parma Senior High and assumed his present administrative position at its completion in September, 1953.

Life memberships in local and state PTA's are among the many honors Mr. Bassett has received. Among the professional organizations to which he belongs is the National Association of Secondary High School Principals. He is also a member of the Parma Lions' Club and the Boosters.

Mr. Bassett's crowded calendar is evidence enough of the many duties which he performs. In addition to conferences with parents, students, and teachers, he co-ordinates extracurricular activities and adjusts classroom difficulties.

Mr. Bassett heads capable administration

Service is the motto of PSH administrators

Mr. Chester W. Gibson, BS, MA

Mr. Gibson, the assistant principal, is in charge of both the teachers' schedules and the master schedule. His permanent job as Senior Class Adviser includes handling the arrangements for both the baccalaureate program and the commencement program. Besides these duties he disciplines eleventh and twelfth grade youths.

At the head of the testing program is Mr. Lesniak, the director of guidance. It is his job to keep students aware of the numerous scholarships available and the visits of college representatives. Besides counseling A through K junior boys, he supervises College Night in the fall.

Mr. Cordisco, the man responsible for all student attendance records, is assisted in this job by six secretaries and a McBee key sort machine. In addition, he handles the discipline of tenth grade boys, at times referring boys of all grades to the Board of Education for further action.

The job of scheduling PSH's 3200 students is one of the many duties of Miss Deacon, the dean of girls. Besides helping new pupils check their credits, she counsels A through K junior girls and handles the job placement of all girls.

Counselors administer standardized tests

Inquiring students and innumerable duties kept Parma's energetic counselors occupied this year. In special interviews underclassmen and seniors received advice on personal problems as well as future plans. Sophomores inquired about school rules or the number of credits required for certain courses, while college-bound seniors requested scholarship information. In addition to interviewing, these capable counselors administered and interpreted tests and instructed guidance classes. They also organized a library consisting of vocational and college material.

Languages help prepare college-bound pupils

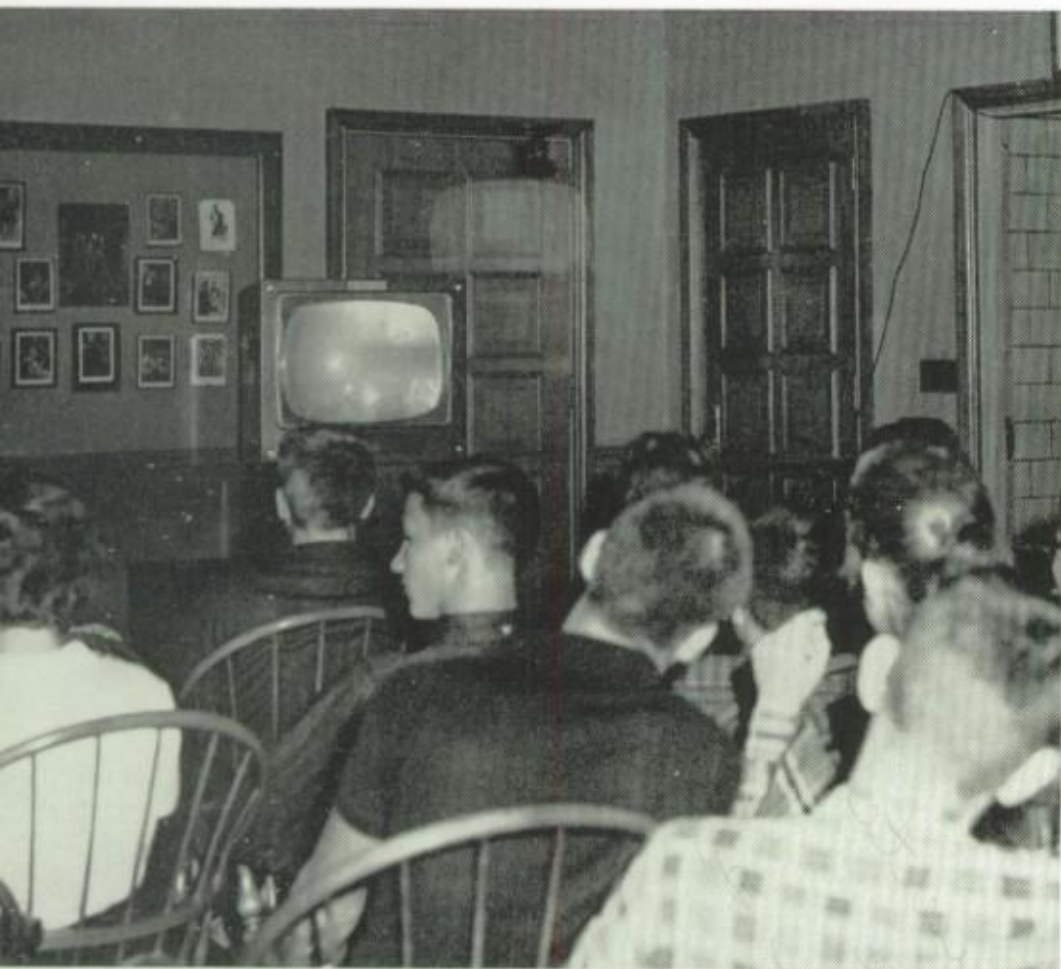

Our language department introduced two courses, Russian II and German III, into its curriculum this year. Also available to academic students were French, Spanish, and Latin. Studying these languages helps pupils understand and appreciate the peoples, customs, and cultures of foreign countries. After mastering basic grammar and vocabulary, they can expand their learning through reading foreign literature. This year a pilot language laboratory was installed at Parma. Students in the entire department contributed to an entertaining foreign language assembly.

Time passes far too quickly for English students at PSH. Hard-working seniors have hardly finished studying the final act of "Macbeth" when they start to prepare term papers and study for final exams. Juniors can usually be found in the library either tackling the history of American literature or "playing hide and seek" with card files in search of information for research papers. The wide scope of literature, grammar, spelling, and written and oral work keeps sophomores active throughout the school year.

In the journalism classes, students learn what makes a newspaper tick by actually putting one together. While Journalism II pupils race with time to make deadlines for our school paper, the Parma Hi-Spot, classes in Journalism I learn the newspaper "lingo" and study basic techniques of reporting, writing, and editing.

Dramatics, which was offered the second semester, and public speaking provide students with the opportunity of developing self-expression. Guidance from the teacher, advice from fellow students, and practice enable them to overcome timidity and develop poise and self-confidence.

"Can anyone guess this charade?" asks Carl Pistilli as his classmates in public speaking thoughtfully look on.

Social studies classes discuss democracy,

LaVerne Barton, Al Fitz, Tony Ardelia, and Bill Russell participate in a panel on current economic problems.

Sophomore guidance students, Jim Placko, Sharon Janusczok, and Betty Todaro, make plans for future vocations.

PSH's social studies courses aim to make good citizens; that is, citizens who are prepared to accept responsibility and face the problems of a modern world. To do this, students must be informed about the world, its history and problems.

In the U. S. history and government classes, juniors and seniors study our rich American heritage, analyze the principles of democracy, and acquire better understanding of the citizen's duty. World history, usually studied by college-bound sophs, follows the development of man from pre-historic times to the modern age.

Present-day social problems such as juvenile delinquency, mental illness, and public health are topics of discussion in a sociology class. Phases of business and commerce such as production, distribution, and consumption are studied by economics students. Current problems classes study history in the making by discussing day-to-day political happenings. Guidance assists students in understanding themselves and others and in making educational and vocational plans. In these ways students prepare themselves to accept the responsibilities of adult citizens.

In intermediate algebra Glenn Shull writes the algebraic equation as Pat Pensock graphs it on the chalkboard.

Adie Amon consults her textbook while Phil Vormelker points out an angle in a complicated geometrical problem.

"What is the thirteenth root of 8192?" Sound difficult? It isn't to a member of a trig class for the answer can be easily found by logarithms. Besides this, students investigate the triangle, the functions of its angles, and its practical application. In solid geometry pupils study planes, lines, and three-dimensional figures.

In addition to a study of equations and means of solving them, algebra introduces signed numbers and polynomials. Plane geometry, besides teaching logical thinking, embraces the study of polygons and ways of proving them congruent.

In second-year algebra the student increases his reasoning through the study of roots, radicals, and exponents, the binomial theorem, and quadratic equations. Some students may cover these topics in intermediate algebra in half the time. College algebra includes more advanced topics such as mathematical induction, permutations, combinations, and determinants.

For those who will need only the basic elements of math for their future use or who desire an applied math course, general math, shop math, and mathematics refresher are offered.

With the advent of the technological age, the demand for qualified scientists has increased. Parma High has met this challenge with the formation of an honors physics course, which enables the gifted students to learn at an advanced rate. After mastering the basic elements of physics, students study some of the fundamental principles of electronics and nuclear physics.

Biology students study everything from amebae to elephants and learn not to call insects "bugs." Lab dissections enable the biology students to use their powers of observation.

Judy Malan, Rich Cameron, and Carolyn Tober listen to a classical recording for their music appreciation class.

The sound of music echoed through PSH's halls every period this year as students displayed musical abilities in vocal as well as instrumental fields. An interest in and knowledge of music rather than exceptional talent were the main requirements for participation in the many musical organizations represented at Parma.

Because of the large number of girls interested in vocal music, the Chansonaires, an all-girl choir, was formed. Members of this and other choral groups presented programs at school functions and public events. Aspiring students hoped to be selected for the top choirs, Concert Choir and Choralaires. PSH's bands played for sports events and community parades while the Orchestra entertained at several concerts. Both the Concert Band and Orchestra entered district and state contests and won top awards.

Students who were interested in the origin and development of musical compositions elected to take the course in music history.

Mr. Robert A. Rewalt, AB

While beginning art students master basic techniques with the use of charcoal, India ink, tempera paints, pencil, watercolors, and chalk, more advanced students begin putting these basic fundamentals into practice by creating ceramic figures, oil paintings, textile designs, and other individual projects. Many of these projects entered in local as well as regional and national contests earn recognition and awards for PSH students.

Students of applied fine arts are given the opportunity to create according to their individual artistic interests. Designing the eye-catching posters which help keep PSH-ers informed about school and civic activities is only one of the many projects of the students of sign painting. Students enrolled in stagecraft learn the basic fundamentals of stage design, scenery construction, and lighting. In addition to gaining a broad knowledge of their respective arts, the students of PSH's art department also gain invaluable experience by serving their school and community.

Rich Chappini, Terry Veal, and Janice Madeley complete their tempera paintings for a class project in Art III.

For Parma's future craftsmen, the Industrial Education Department offers a wide variety of courses in electricity, drafting, wood, crafts, and metals. Once these principles are mastered, students are better qualified to enter one of the various trades. Classes in plastics, leather, and photography enable the student to discover and develop new fields of interest.

Driver training is one of the subjects open to upperclassmen. Under expert supervision, students learn some basic automotive mechanics as well as the "do's" and "don't's" of driving.

This year the department expanded its curriculum with the addition of two new courses. The vocational arts course provides twenty periods of shop work plus five periods of classroom study a week for the future printers. Previously part of the mathematics department, industrial math was added to the industrial education curriculum.

Highlighting a year of activities for the Industrial Arts Department was the Ohio State Industrial Arts Convention held in Columbus. For the last five years, Parma has had the best display in its classification at the contest.

Business education trains students for work

Diane Bakos and Eileen Tuhacek gain valuable skills in writing shorthand forms by practicing from their texts.

In the typing class which follows Diane and Eileen apply their shorthand skills as they transcribe dictated notes.

As the sounds of the business world ring in the halls of PSH, future secretaries and business leaders prepare themselves for the years ahead. Acquainting students with the modern business world and its various aspects has become the primary goal of Parma's business education department. General business introduces to the students the many phases of the business world that might be encountered in their personal lives.

Aspiring young secretaries strive to attain their goals by studying shorthand, typing, and bookkeeping; business English and secretarial practice assist them in developing basic office skills. Future comptometer operators gain actual experience in office machines class.

Commercial law stresses legal matters as they pertain to one's rights and duties as an American citizen. Prospective businessmen at PSH also elect courses in consumer education, economic geography, and salesmanship to broaden their knowledge of business. Personal typing proves to be invaluable to students planning to attend college. Many phases of business are explored by the commercial students of Parma Senior High.

Gym classes provide fun as students develop

Veronica Dempsey and Bob Brady have fun as they develop skill and dexterity on the trampoline in the PSH gym.

Three girls get the ball over the net in a game of cage ball, one of many team sports that develop co-ordination.

By offering a variety of team and individual activities, the physical education program gives everyone a chance to enjoy sports through participation. Boys' classes are divided into periods of touch football, basketball, wrestling, and baseball. Co-ed classes for square dancing are a favorite phase of the curriculum. With teachers and records giving the "calls," everyone enjoys learning and practicing the basic steps and swings.

For the girls, modern dance proves both strenuous and interesting as dance techniques are developed in class through types of choreography.

skill and fitness through group activities

Promenade and allemande left are familiar terms to students as they attempt to become "expert" square dancers.

Both girls' and boys' classes use the apparatus and find the ropes, rings, and parallel bars offer a variety of fun while the "tramp" is the center of interest for all who want to learn new skills and increase coordination. The obstacle course proves to be another challenge of speed, endurance, and strength as students compete to see who is fastest. At the beginning and end of the school year, classes go outdoors in good weather. Tennis, speedball, and softball for the girls are several of the sports offered. Health, a requirement for all juniors, is included in this department.

Learning to serve well-balanced, eye-appealing meals as well as to increase their knowledge of nutrition is the prime objective of students enrolled in PSH's food classes. Girls may gain recognition by entering the National Cherry Pie Baking Contest and the Betty Crocker Search for the American Homemaker of Tomorrow. In clothing classes pupils learn the fundamentals of clothing selection and construction. Students taking homemaking learn to care for their future homes and families. In personal regimen girls work towards personal and social development.

Taking inventory of supplies and equipment is just one of the many duties performed by clinic aid, Margie Rea.

SCHOOL NURSE—Mrs. Hazel M. Swanson, RN.

Providing immediate first aid and care for ill and injured students is the principal function of Parma High's clinic. With the assistance of twenty volunteer Clinic Aids, serving a period a day, School Nurse Mrs. Swanson tests the hearing and vision of all sophomores and new students. Mrs. Swanson and her assistant, Mrs. Maloch, aid the doctor in providing physical examinations for sophomores and athletes. They also supervise all clinic procedure. Pupils suffering from illness find the clinic helpful and Parma's Future Nurses Club often uses it for its headquarters.

Secretaries and cooks and custodians work

Mrs. Schwartz momentarily leaves her secretarial duties to assign some work to Joanne Dumanski, an office page.

Thirty-two hundred students and an enormous school means hard work for PSH's many secretaries, cooks, and custodians. These diligent people make up the non-teaching staff.

This year secretaries in the attendance office have relieved the guidance counselors of time-consuming attendance chores. Secretaries in the main office sell workbooks, operate the "lost and found," and also perform such clerical duties as supplying information for college transcripts or working permits and typing and running off tests. Among other secretarial duties is that of keeping pupils' scholastic records up-to-date.

Baking cream puffs and making porcupine balls are all in a day's work for the competent cooks at PSH. They prepare and serve the mountains of food bought by hungry PSH-ers every day in the hot lunch and milk and snack lines.

Staying after school is nothing new for PSH's custodians. Every day these men keep the rooms and corridors clean and the building in good repair. Seventeen cleaning ladies come in each night to help them do the job efficiently. Caring for PSH is a twenty-four hour job!

activities

Dear Sandy,
 Well it sure has been a long time that I have known you. I don't think I will ever forget the fun we have had. Remember when we shared lockers in 7th grade.

Dianne Scheffler, Karen Kvaska, and Kathleen Krakora, members of Future Teachers, serve the faculty by grading English papers.

The sharp rap of a gavel calling a Council meeting to order, somber tones of a Negro spiritual drifting from the choir room, girls in white cardigans selling tickets, the orchestra tuning up just before curtain time, the smell of hot coffee permeating the air at football games—these are sights and sounds of PSH activities. From winter mornings until warm spring dusks Parma High was alive with a multitude of organizations. Bake sales, dances, building floats, field trips, and fund raising plus all-school productions were among the many activities at Parma this year.

We have both grown a lot in those years. May I wish you the best of everything in the future.

Sincerely,
 Dianne Scheffler

SCM and Cabinet stimulate student service

At the helm of PSH's student government was Tom Good, Student Council President and Student City Manager. His job was to coordinate activities through the Cabinet and Council.

The Student City Cabinet, appointed by Tom Good, met twice a month to advise the Student City Manager and the Student Council. Through its eight departments the Cabinet efficiently carried out its duties which included planning interesting and educational assemblies, furnishing transportation for athletic events, maintaining good public relations between the school and community, publicizing school events, and providing noon recreation for PSH-ers.

By sponsoring activities such as pep rallies and a sophomore mixer, the Cabinet helped students become acquainted and encouraged school spirit. Also on the first day of school the members served as guides for students confused by mazelike halls. They raised money by sponsoring a booth at the annual All School Party.

As Student City Manager, Tom Good presides at Student Council Cabinet meetings and introduces our assemblies.

By collecting food at Thanksgiving for distribution to Parma's needy families and sponsoring two pep rallies and the All School Party, this year's Student Council encouraged school spirit and good citizenship. The Council also held a window decorating contest among the classes as part of PSH's yearly Christmas display.

Competition for membership in Student Council began early in the year as candidates obtained the signatures of ten classmates on a petition. Each class then elected ten members to represent the student body in school government. Meeting with Mr. Lang and Mr. Loffman, the advisers, the group helped solve many of PSH's problems.

The Council raised money to contribute to the United Appeal and conducted a tax stamp drive. Members also participated in LEL Day at Euclid High School. Council members presented several ideas for the future establishment of a student recreation room at Parma and contributed part of the tax stamp drive earnings to this project.

students in fun and worthwhile enterprises

A Halloween sock hop, the annual Christmas canteen, and a salute to our champion varsity football and cross-country teams were a few of the outstanding dances planned and presented by the Canteen Committee. To MC the Saturday night canteens, the committee engaged many well-known personalities. These personalities furnished a variety of music for dancing and brought with them such prominent entertainers as the Pony-Tails and Dorsey Burnett. At one of these canteens, a King and Queen of the Hop were chosen.

Supervised by a PTA committee on canteen organization and faculty adviser, Mr. Spittal, the committee met whenever necessary to discuss plans for coming attractions and community services. This year they donated the proceeds of one canteen to the United Appeal and also contributed to the hospital fund. Purchasing pins for all National Honor Society inductees was another of the services performed by the committee. They ended their work with an annual banquet.

Sue Lorenzen pleads with Al Hubley during a very tense moment in the last act of this year's Senior Class play.

"Thrilling," "stirring," "meaningful" — each of these words could have aptly described this year's Senior Class play, "The Robe."

Adapted from Lloyd C. Douglas' best-selling novel, "The Robe" was rich in dramatic effects and spiritual meaning. The play centered around Marcellus Gallio, a Roman officer who gained possession of the Robe after the crucifixion of Christ. The strange powers possessed by the Robe led Marcellus to become a Christian. The climax of the play was both powerful and poignant as Marcellus and his wife bravely faced death as martyrs.

Under the direction of Mr. Mayer, the cast of 25 performed against a white setting relieved by the brilliant coloring of the costumes and lights. The combination of this stunning setting, the play, and the cast made "The Robe" another milestone in the dramatic presentations of Parma Senior High.

as they range from seriousness to satire

The escapades of a late knight errant and his mangy nag provided the theme for the junior play. The juniors presented "The Wonderful Adventures of Don Quixote." This farce-comedy was adapted from Book One of Cervantes' novel, "Don Quixote," written in 1603. The book portrays the strange life of Don Quixote, an old man who tries to revive the age of chivalry on the Spanish countryside. A barber who has stolen a golden helmet, an army of white sheep led by a black one, a battle with a windmill, and a duel with his mortal enemy, the Knight of the White Moon, give Don Quixote and his sidekick Sancho Panza a night of hilarious adventures.

The Varsity Band completed the gay atmosphere by presenting Spanish music with a lively and enchanting tempo before the performance.

The junior play, under the direction of Mr. Mayer with Julie Adams and Jack Kostelnik assisting as student directors, was a tremendous success—a credit to the class of 1961.

Drama and service groups gain experience as Masquers, the club designed to give basic experience in theater work, made a fresh start last fall with its adviser Mrs. Koledin. Make-up, stage settings, and acting were fields that the club studied. Those who actively participated earned points for membership in Thespians.

Soc N' Buskin's goal was to assist the music, speech, and dramatic organizations. Under the direction of Miss Milliron, members staged a one-act play, ushered at school plays, and worked in the cloakroom. Club projects included a candy sale, and bowling, skating, and theater parties.

All the groups that performed in the little theatre or auditorium were grateful to the Stage Crew for its assistance. With the help of Mr. Specht, the boys arranged the stage settings for the junior and senior plays, the Christmas Concert, Variety Show, and Choral Extravaganza.

Three signs introduced by Parma's Youth Traffic Council may soon be seen on the nation's roads. A part of the Cleveland Youth Traffic Council, this active group, sponsored by Mr. Bridgeman, promoted safe driving for teens through assembly talks, radio broadcasts, and newspaper articles.

they learn teaching and nursing techniques

"Do I have the ability and desire to become a teacher?" The Future Teachers of America Club assisted its members in answering this question. Ten hours of required service each month to the school or the community helped FTA members test their ability to cooperate and work with people. Members earned these hours by selling FTA book covers in the bookstore, serving as library or office pages, or working for teachers.

In the middle of January, the Boys' and Girls' FTA combined to form one club with a membership of 100. The group held two meetings each month with Miss Givens and Mr. Maniaci.

Two actual teaching experiences were the most important events of the year for qualified FTA members. Each chose a class in an elementary or junior high school and attended that class twice each semester. The first visit was a period of observation of teaching procedure. During the second time in that class, each member received valuable teaching experience through practice.

Helping girls make wise choices in preparation for the nursing profession was one of the prime objectives of the Future Nurses of America.

Over 50 girls with a mutual interest in nursing met at least twice a month to discuss questions concerning their futures. During the year visits to several area hospitals gave the girls an opportunity to see professional nurses in action.

With the help of their advisers, Mrs. Swanson and Miss Lawton, FNA members participated in both service and social activities. Throughout the year the girls visited a blind teen-age invalid whom they had "adopted." At Thanksgiving, Christmas, and other holidays they provided food baskets and gifts for her and her family. Social activities during the year included the annual Christmas party and presentation of pins.

After volunteering ten hours of service during the year, members were presented the FNA pin—the symbol of their willingness to work hard for their chosen profession and humanity.

Many PSH girls spent their free periods as pages for the main office, attendance office, and counselors this year. This active group performed numerous duties which included collecting attendance cards, locating students and teachers, and doing typing and filing.

Assisting Mrs. Swanson, head nurse, in running the clinic smoothly and efficiently were twenty volunteer Clinic Aids. Each girl was required to receive seven class periods of instruction on nursing techniques and skills. A real desire to enter the nursing field was also a requirement.

Music, laughter, and sighs drifted out of the auditorium each day while PSH students watched movies during the free half of their lunch period. This year's Movie Crew, composed of seven projectionists, the ticket sellers, and ushers, was under the direction of Mr. Cowgill.

Audio-Visual Aids, under the direction of Mr. Cowgill, operated all classroom movies, record players, and tape recorders plus the sound equipment in the auditorium, little theatre, and at athletic events. Members also ordered, scheduled, and returned all films used at Parma.

many services welcomed by the student body

"Hall pass, please!" Every period of the day the Hall Guards repeated this request at their posts. Their duty was to maintain safety and order in the corridors. With Miss Hawkins as their adviser, they attempted to smooth out the difficulties of enforcing school rules.

The negligence of others necessitated many of their duties, such as picking up papers in the halls and reporting violations. At their annual banquet the safety director, Janet Maneri, her assistant, Toni Vallejo, and the Hall Guards were honored for their service to the school.

Parma students pursue diverse interests

Promoting interest in various fields became the primary goal of PSH's Home Economics Club. Advised by Miss Roberts, the girls raised money for a Home Ec scholarship by selling pens and vanilla. They brightened the holiday season at Parmadale by donating gifts for the orphans.

Supervised by Detective Martin Feador of the Parma Police, the Senior Patrol performed many valuable services for PSH. Helping the dazed sophomores find their first classes and guarding at all school-sponsored functions and athletic contests were only two of their many duties.

Junior Council on World Affairs is a discussion club. Throughout the year JCWA had many debates and lectures concerning world problems and political affairs. The high point of the year was the Model United Nations Assembly held at Lake-wood High. Mr. Shipman was the adviser.

Arranging 10,000 books on the shelves of the new library was a job done quickly and efficiently with the help of the volunteer Library Aids. Each aid served a period or more a day, and under the supervision of Miss Silva, head librarian, they helped students check out books.

Selecting a dinner from a menu containing only French foods was an enjoyable experience for members of the French Club. With their advisers, Miss Campbell and Miss Kanaris, they attended a French opera, had a Christmas party, and ended an eventful year with a picnic in the spring.

Latin Club members enjoyed the slide program presented by a guest at one of their meetings. Advised by Mrs. Robinson, they had a booth at the All School Party and a cookie sale at Christmas. Their social activities included an ice skating party, two picnics, and a Christmas party.

Truth, fellowship, leadership, and service, the symbols of the YWCA, were the inspirations which encouraged all Y-Teens to promote world friendship and serve their school and community. Working together, Parma Y-Teens reflected the principles of the "Y" in many ways.

Social as well as service activities were found on the Senior Y-Teen calendar. Guided by Mrs. Duke, the girls made school-aid kits for the underprivileged children of Korea and Hong-Kong, while the annual Senior Farewell in the spring brought this memorable year to a close.

Selling programs at football games, preparing a pot-luck dinner, and serving as hostesses at the YMCA Inaugural Dinner were a few of the many activities planned by Junior Y-Teens. Under the guidance of Miss Hanser, the girls also prepared tray favors for patients at a local hospital.

Sophette Y-Teens began an eventful year by selling pom-poms at one of Parma's home football games. With the help of their adviser Mrs. Way, the girls made small toys and scrapbooks for the children having to stay at Deaconess Evangelical Hospital during the Easter holidays.

"Rest today for tomorrow is the deadline" might well have been the motto of the Parma Hi-Spot staff as they interviewed such people as Harry Belafonte, Emmett Kelly, and "Santa Claus," and wrote reams of copy in an effort to give PSH-ers an interesting and informative newspaper.

Publishing the bi-weekly paper, under Mr. Piskos' guidance, gave much valuable experience to reporters, page editors, and photographers.

Under the supervision of financial adviser Mrs. Crossley, the Parma Hi-Spot's business staff solicited advertisements and did the accounting.

Teaching new writing techniques was one aim of PSH's two-year old chapter of Quill and Scroll. This honorary society included members of the staffs of school publications. In the spring, Mr. Piskos presented trophies for the best editorial, news, and features to the Parma Hi-Spot.

Taking orders for Spectrums, collecting money from students, and handling the distribution of the books in the spring were the foremost tasks of this year's Spectrum business staff and Mrs. Lewis, the adviser. In senior homerooms, staff members also sold friendship pictures.

"Time," as suggested by a myriad of sundials, clocks, and watches on the cover and division pages, was the theme for the 1960 Spectrum. The theme correlated the senior, underclass, faculty, activities, sports, and student life sections which, together, comprised the book.

The Spectrum staff began last summer with an idea, and from that the various sections of the book took character. This fall a staff of twelve editors and thirteen writers started the long task of writing copy, headlines, and cutlines, and checking idents, while photographers began the work of picturing a year of school. Under the guidance of Joyce Tokar, editor-in-chief, and Miss Wilson, faculty adviser, the 1960 Spectrum was finally sent to the printers on March 24.

The year was climaxed by the annual Spectrum staff picnic held late in May when the 1960 year-books were unboxed for the first time, and the staff received its first opportunity to see the culmination of a year's work.

Sharon Januszczok, Sandra Thomas combine their talents while preparing a duet for the solo and ensemble contest.

With only a month of preparation, the Concert Orchestra launched the 1960 season with the presentation of their first fall concert. This organization, directed by Mr. Cowden, employed a nucleus of strings, with brass, percussion, and woodwind instruments added for the desired blend.

Besides performing at the senior play, they journeyed to the annual LEL Orchestra Festival held at Euclid, where they presented music from "Flower Drum Song" and "Showboat." February 27 found them at the state orchestra contest. There they received Division 1 ratings from all four judges. They completed the year with concerts in March and June, an April assembly for PSH-ers, and a performance in the baccalaureate service.

Under Mr. Cowden's guidance, Parma's chapter of the Young People's Chamber Music Society has grown this year. Besides studying ensemble techniques and applying them in their groups, they heard lectures. Supplementing this, the group attended a production of "Music Man" in May.

Solos, ensembles, marching shows, and concerts—these were the accomplishments of PSH's bands.

Concert Band earned public recognition and acclaim this year through an expanded concert season. Three formal appearances, a contest, and an assembly demanded a varied and exciting repertoire. Varsity Band provided music at the National Honor Society induction and junior play in addition to their two concert appearances.

Marching shows have become a Friday night tradition to the Byers Field fans. Ten football games meant ten shows to the 120-piece Marching Band. The group, composed of both Concert and Varsity Bands, presented entertaining shows such as "TV Commercials" during each half time.

PSH instrumentalists displayed exceptional skill when they received 42 Division 1 ratings in this year's Greater Cleveland Solo-Ensemble Contest.

On March 18 PSH and the Concert Choir welcomed the best choirs from the LEL schools for the annual Choir Festival. Following a practice and entertainment in the afternoon, they formed a 535-voice group and sang such numbers as "Thy Will Be Done" and "Master of Human Destinies."

After singing for the Kiwanian Memorial Service, the Concert Choir recorded "Adeste Fideles," which was later heard in Europe over the "Voice of America." Under Miss Hill's direction, they also sang in the Christmas and spring concerts and the Easter Sunrise Program.

Parmanaires, PSH's male group under the direction of Miss Hill, enjoyed an inspiring year of song. Besides preparing for three appearances, they spent many hours sight-reading all types of music, including foreign songs, American ballads, barbershop melodies, and Negro spirituals.

This year the two girls' choirs, Chansonaires and Choralaires, appeared many times. The outfits of the newest of the choirs, Chansonaires, were red jumpers purchased for them by the Music Club. The group, composed mostly of sophomores, met three times a week under the direction of Mr. Elliott. They made their first public appearance at Halle's Southland Pavilion at Christmas. Their selections in the annual Christmas Candlelight Concert and the Christmas assembly included "White Christmas" and "Snow Legend."

Choralaires, consisting mostly of juniors and seniors, provided the most advanced music experience for an all-girl choir. Under the direction of Miss Hill, they practiced three periods a week. In their royal blue robes topped with white dickies, they performed at Fairview Park Hospital for the second consecutive year, in the fall concert, in the Christmas concert, and at the Christmas assembly. Their selections included "Birthday of a King," "Autumn Leaves," and "Eternal Life." In the fall they held a get-acquainted party at which they learned about the Hawaiian Islands from an interesting guest speaker.

Scholarship, leadership, service, and character are four qualifications required of those inducted into National Honor Society. Students having at least a 4.0 average receive a rating on these qualifications from the faculty. The society inducted ten per cent of the Senior Class in October and five per cent of the Junior Class in the spring. With Mrs. Snyder and Mrs. Stoddard, the two advisers, the group met after school on the first Monday of each month.

To meet expenses of the inductions, the group sold Sportsman's Show tickets. High points of the year included a Christmas party, a banquet, and the annual picnic in the spring.

One of the projects of the group was a follow-up study of 1956 graduates. The NHS conducted this survey for the Educational Testing Service in an effort to interview all 1956 alumni. The information gathered in the survey supplied data needed to determine the position of the average high school graduate after three years.

This year many PSH students took time out of their busy schedules for sports. Our athletic department helped provide a Saturday recreation program for students attending Parma schools. A fine intramural program was also offered to boys and girls to help perfect individual skills and to stress the fundamentals of teamwork. Parma's varsity competitors upheld the honor of their Alma Mater on the gridiron, basketball court, the track, and baseball diamond. The football team under Head Coach Brugge and Coaches Fritzsche, Galleher, and Fricker got the sports scene off to a fine start.

Redmen capture second straight LEL crown

In the opening game of the season Parma's Redmen upset highly rated St. Ignatius. The first three quarters resulted in a scoreless deadlock, but in the closing minutes of the final quarter Parma erupted for two touchdowns and held on to win 14-6. For his outstanding play Frank Brzygot made the News Dream Team and PresStars.

Flashing a good running and passing game, Parma defeated its neighborhood rivals, the Rhodes Rams 24-6. For his alert play Jack Wood earned a spot on the News Dream Team.

Parma's powerhouse continued to roll as the Redmen crushed St. Edward's 40-14. While completely dominating play, Parma bagged 28 points in the second quarter to put the game on ice.

After a fierce first-half battle by an aroused Euclid High football team, Parma came from an 8-6 half-time deficit to defeat the Panthers 18-8 in the opening Lake Erie League game. Parma's defense did not allow Euclid to make a first down.

"The best Parma team yet" was the way Coach Brugge termed his Redmen after they defeated Shaw 6-0. Parma's defense held the Shaw backs at bay while the offense clicked for a third quarter touchdown. For his outstanding defensive play Bill Brucchieri became a member of both the News Dream Team and PresStars.

The Redmen journeyed to Shaker Heights and returned with a 16-8 victory. Parma struck early to gain a lead which it never relinquished.

Trailing 3-0 until late in the game, the Redmen staged a strong comeback to defeat a highly underrated Lakewood team 8-3. In spite of its low score, this proved to be the most exciting game of the season for the Parma team.

The Parma Redmen wrapped up their second consecutive Lake Erie League title with their 26-8 conquest of visiting Cleveland Heights. Parma backs scored at will while the Tigers were unable to penetrate into Parma territory until the final quarter. For his tremendous effort Doug Lyons was placed on the News Dream Team.

Surprised by a good Berea team, Parma was forced to battle all the way down to the wire to pull out its ninth victory of the season. Greatly hampered by a muddy field, Parma pushed the ball over late in the fourth quarter to win 6-0 and finish its second straight undefeated season.

Parma's junior varsity Redmen, coached by Mr. Ellis and Mr. Wiley, rambled to a respectable 5-3-1 record in competition this year.

The JV's highlighted their season with wins over Rhodes 38-0, St. Joe's 42-14, Euclid 8-0, Shaw 14-8, and Shaker 30-12. The junior Redmen settled for an 8-8 tie with St. Ed's, but due to loss of key players, they dropped their last three games to Lakewood 0-6, Heights 0-22, and Ignatius 0-22.

All efforts of the spirited JV's, however, proved to be in vain, for due to an oversight in eligibility, they had to forfeit all their games.

This year's cross-country team, coached by Mr. Sistek, enjoyed the most successful season in its seven-year history. In dual meets, the harriers hustled to a 6 win -1 loss record.

In the first meet of the year Parma defeated a strong Berea team 21-38. Rhodes was trounced by the harriers 16-46, and West fell in like manner 23-38. In the tune-up for the LEL, the cross-country team soundly defeated Shaw 18-32 but fell to powerful Euclid 33-32. The dual meets were successfully concluded with both Brecksville and Latin being shut out by the score of 15-50.

The honors won by the team this year included a fifth place finish in the Bowling Green relays, first place in the Lake Erie League, and first place in the district meet. The latter victory qualified them for the state meet in which they placed second to Cleveland John Adams.

Parma's varsity cagers, coached by Mr. Broski and Mr. Bihary, posted a 7 win-11 loss record. The Redmen finished in fourth place in LEL with a modest 4-6 effort for the season.

In the season's opener, Al Canitia dropped in 22 points to lead the Redmen to a 73-50 decision over the St. Edward's Eagles. Frank Brzygot and Bob Bass chipped in with 17 points each.

In the next game Parma could score only seven points in the last half after taking a half-time lead of 29-24 and fell to Youngstown Rayen 47-36.

The Redmen grabbed an early lead and held it all the way as they trounced Painesville Harvey 71-48. Bob Bass led the scoring with 25 points.

Parma took both of its games with Euclid. With Bob Bass hitting for 19 points and Terry Prah dumping in 13 more, the cagers soundly defeated the Panthers 78-59. In the second contest Parma edged the improved Euclid High team 52-48.

Outclassed by the Cardinals, the Redmen dropped both of their games to the powerful team from Shaw High by scores of 47-43 and 67-38.

The Alumni, paced by the expert ball handling of Bill Gambino, handed the Redmen another loss.

Parma split with Shaker Heights, dropping the first game 40-35 but coming back to defeat the Raiders 53-46 in the second contest.

The Rams from Rhodes High handed the Redmen a 69-60 setback in their neighborhood rivalry.

In the first meeting of the year Lakewood easily defeated Parma 64-51. In the second game the Rangers got their biggest LEL scare of the year as they were forced to come from behind in the final minutes to defeat the Redmen 50-49. Frank Brzygot and Bob Bass each had 18 for Parma.

Hitting only 15 per cent from the field, Parma dropped their first meeting to Cleveland Heights 50-45. In the second meeting the Redmen cashed in on the 24 points and fine rebounding of Bob Bass to defeat the Tigers 43-34.

Paced by Al Canitia's 23 points, Parma pulled out a real thriller against Berea 58-57.

The Redmen took their worst beating of the year as they fell to the Lorain Steelmen 71-53.

The sectional jinx held true for Parma as the Redmen cagers experienced an off night and were whipped by South in the opening game 59-55.

Bob Blazak shows that intramural competition is keen as he quickly attempts to block an opponent's short set shot.

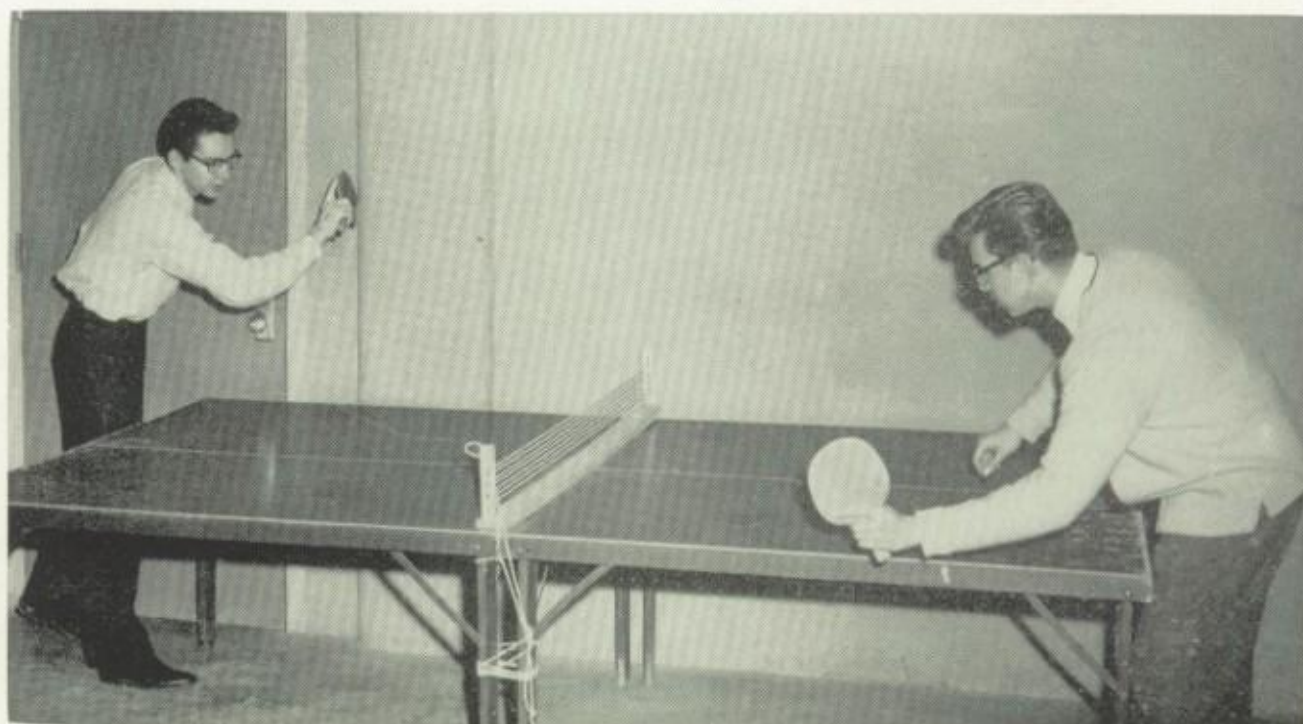

John Holden attempts to sink a jump shot which will put his team in the lead in an intramural basketball game.

Intramural Director Mr. Galleher and his assistant Mr. Cline gave Parma the most complete program that PSH has ever seen. The fall activities got off to a fine start with touch football providing the recreation. The indoor season included such activities as basketball, bowling, table tennis, and a foul shooting contest. In the spring boys were able to participate in golf, softball, badminton, and tennis.

The team and individual champions all received trophies for their achievements in the various sporting activities and athletic contests.

Among the honors won by the matmen this year were a second place tie in the LEL, a first place trophy from the Hiram Invitational Tournament, a third place in the district competition, and a tie for tenth place in the state. For the state tournament at Columbus, Parma qualified Captain Ed Flory, who was all LEL, Neil Fassinger, Roger Steck, and State Champion Harry Houska.

A week after their last game on March 5, the pinmen invaded Linsz-Superior Recreation for the roll-off tournament and proceeded to rack up a record three game total of 3116 pins. The Redmen became the first team in the league's history to bag both awards in the same season.

Corridor workouts and gymnasium practices were not uncommon for Parma's diamond dwellers, forced indoors by March's raw weather. Nevertheless, the team worked hard in preparation for the opening contest with Rocky River on April 7. Although the pitching, catching, and outfield were sound, Coaches Fricker and Holzinger were confronted with rebuilding the infield positions.

With the initiation of new conditioning drills and exercises, the Redmen were gunning for first place in the LEL, which has been occupied by Euclid's Panthers for the past four seasons.

The track team, under its new Head Coach Mr. Sistek and Assistant Coach Mr. Furpahs, participated in a tough 14 meet schedule which, this year, included the Ohio Wesleyan Relays and the Muskingum Relays. High spots of the 1960 season were the district meet at Rhodes, the LEL meet at Shaker Heights, and the state meet held at Columbus. Paced by five returning lettermen and numerous promising juniors and sophomores, the cindermen worked hard in an effort to dethrone the reigning LEL and district track powers and gain their first major track championship.

Under the experienced eye of Coach Fritzsche, the 1960 golfers swung into their second season as part of the 6 team West Side Public School League. The linksmen frequently practiced into the evening hours preparing for the rugged ten-match schedule. Inter-team competition was keen, as aspiring young members challenged the veterans for higher positions on the squad. Climaxing the season were the LEL and district matches.

Rope whistles, black and white garb, and plenty of spirit characterized the members of the Boys Leaders Club. Supervised by Mr. Fritzsche, the boys met once a week to learn more of the growing gym program. They used this know-how in many ways, such as in demonstrating skills, leading calisthenics, and officiating both in class and at intramurals. A get-acquainted gym party with the Girls Leaders offered social entertainment.

As student aides in the physical education department, Girls Leaders assisted in classes by taking attendance, demonstrating skills, and also by officiating at intramurals. With their advisers, Miss Felt and Mrs. Magyar, the girls held a mother-daughter dinner and spent a weekend at Hiram House Camp. The pinning of new Leaders and the farewell dinner during Leaders' Week were two exciting times enjoyed by this group.

These five Leaders enjoy themselves as they work quickly to finish their float in time for the Homecoming parade.

Intramural teams compete for championships

Several girls report their positions to Janice Todor at the scorer's table before starting their basketball game.

Coming from the girls' gym every Monday and Friday after school was the excited cheering and shouting of the some 200 girls who participated in intramurals. Co-presidents Bonnie Flick and Linda Briggs, with their advisers Miss Felt and Miss Siciliano, set up the year's program which included basketball, volleyball, and softball. While enjoying companionship and recreation, the girls developed skill through team competition.

This year intramural bowling drew some 36 teams to Parma Recreation every Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoon. At the Cuyahoga County Roll-Off in January, our top team won the handicap, home alley, and individual trophies. A week later the All-Stars duplicated this accomplishment, and Kathy Natherson also won an individual high trophy with a score of 208. Bowling advisers were Miss Felt, Miss Brownell, and Miss Cochran.

Judy Radiszewski and Donna Lakins hope to add strikes to their scores as they demonstrate their bowling form.

Whether taking part in the assemblies or leading the crowd in support of the Redmen, the varsity and JV cheerleaders helped spark enthusiasm and school spirit in the student body. The girls, advised by Mrs. Magyar and Mrs. Kishman, practiced three nights a week to improve their cheering student life

SPECTRUM art editor Cynthia Russell carefully places a book in the showcase display publicizing the sale of the SPECTRUM.

Time was precious to most of us at PSH during the past year. Because of the active lives we led, there never seemed to be enough minutes and hours in each day. As students, we found much time was consumed in class and in completing homework "after-hours." As sports enthusiasts, we attended football games. As members of our respective classes, we devoted time to producing assemblies and plays; we also joined many clubs. Although we often wondered at our "ability" to squeeze so much into each day, we knew that all this activity was part of student life at PSH.

Tony Iacobucci and Donna Morgan pause to browse for a moment and to select a book from the new library's shelves

Library addition gives PSH a "new look"

Scorching autumn sunshine, snow and icy winds, and damp spring days did not prevent PSH's 3200 students from coming to school each weekday morning. We either piled into buses or trudged on foot to another bustling day of activity.

We arrived at different times. "Early birds" were in the cafeteria as early as 7:15. Most of us who walked came at 7:45. Then there always were the unfortunate people who overslept and, if they hurried, arrived just in time to avoid a trip to the office for a tardy slip.

During those minutes between 7:45 and 8:00, the halls echoed with more activity than at any other time of the day. We rushed to our lockers because we needed at least five minutes to get them opened, put away coats, and find necessary books. After several important trips to such places as the library, supply store, and the office, none of us could resist a last minute chat. But a glance at the clock told us to hurry to our 8:00 o'clock class and start another day's work.

Mrs. Way's homeroom devotes its dutiful and concentrated attention to some very familiar paper work: schedule cards.

Accompanied by a tuba, these members of the PSH marching band display lots of spirit as they yell, "Charge!"

Byers Field, usually a placid place, came alive each Friday night in the fall as mobs of PSH-ers and Parma partisans swarmed in to encourage the Redmen. "Standing room only" was often the situation even before the game started.

As the starting lineups were announced, confetti flew, ticker tape streamed, and the agile and apparently tireless cheerleaders helped us yell encouragement for our team. We stood as Parma's band played the national anthem and then settled back to watch the action on the field. It was well worth watching. We could divide this season's games into two classes: exciting and truly nerve-wracking. But the Redmen won them all!

Often we noticed our voices threatening to give out so we were grateful for half time. We beat trails to the refreshment stands, consumed hot chocolate, cherry pop, and popcorn, and returned to our seats to watch the half-time show. Then we stood proudly to sing the Alma Mater.

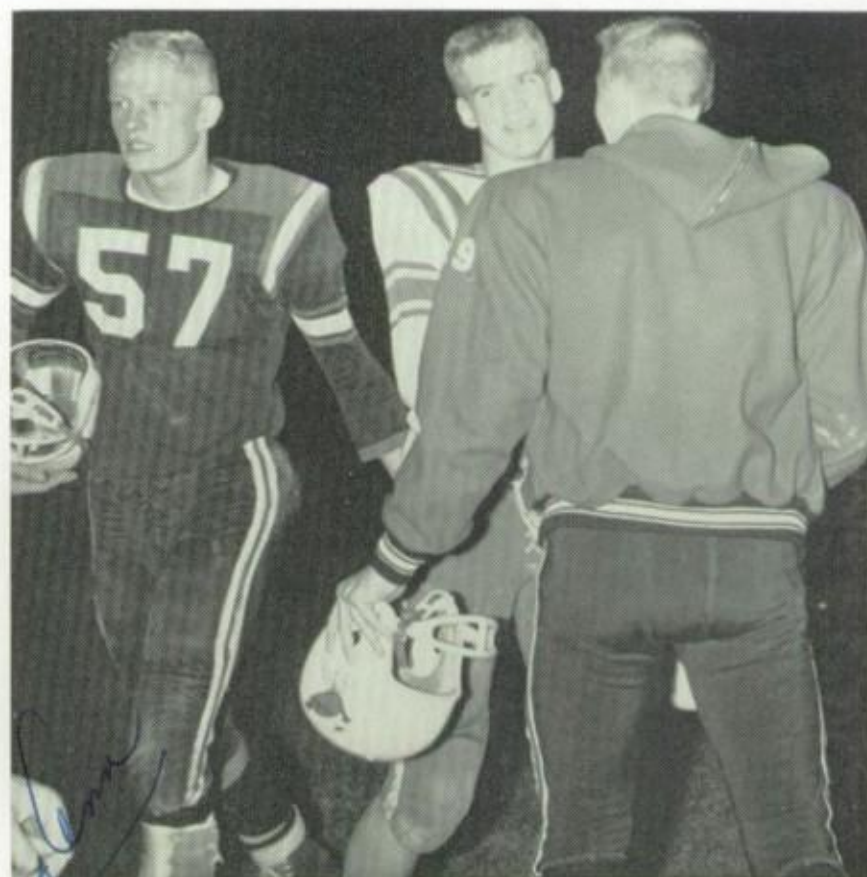

But the greatest moment of all came at the end of the last quarter. "Eleven...ten...nine..." we counted off the game's final seconds—and then cheered our tribute to another Redmen victory.

"The Little Injun That Could" did: namely, win first in the Homecoming float contest for the Boys Boosters.

while Parma students and citizens cheer

Preparations began weeks in advance. Elections were held in senior homerooms. Club members grew glassy-eyed from working on their floats every night. The band and the football team practiced long and diligently. Parma alumni made plans to be home the weekend of the big event. And then at last it was Friday, October 16: Homecoming.

Homecoming began with a parade down Ridge Road, which featured floats from school-sponsored clubs including Boosters, Leaders, and Y-Teens. Boys Boosters won first place with their float titled "The Little Injun that Could." But the parade's highlights were the queen, Adrienne Amon, and her four attendants, Linda Briggs, Joy Gerding, Marilyn Sponseller, and Linda Thompson.

At the game Parma's Redmen trounced Shaw, 6-0. And half time saw the climax of the evening as Queen Adie received her crown from Marlyn Gelo, PSH's Homecoming Queen of 1958.

The Coronation Ball, held the next evening, was a gay finish to a wonderful weekend: Homecoming.

Homecoming's proud, thrilling moments were many, but perhaps the best one was Queen Adie's coronation.

Canteens are regular social features; some Newly met acquaintances or old friends? Karen Emery's dancing partner during the sophomore mixer is Jim Good.

We think of Saturday night—and we wish it were closer. We may anticipate a chance to relax in the liveliest fashion possible. We may look forward to a cheerful evening with our friends—or with that sharp guy or girl we've just met. In short, we look forward to canteen!

What's the formula for a canteen? It's this: the newest records and the latest dance steps, plus one of our favorite disc jockeys. Add as many PSH-ers as possible. Assemble these in the cafeteria on Saturday evening: these equal fun!

Several canteens emphasized variety. A sock hop proved to be easy on the gym floor although chilling for those susceptible to cold feet. And we remember the Christmas canteen with the tree decorated with the ornaments that we brought.

The Student City Cabinet-sponsored sophomore mixer in September not only gave the Class of '62 a chance to get acquainted and to take their place in PSH social affairs but also gave them their first taste of the good times ahead at PSH.

Dancing feet—shoeless, of course—and smiling faces are seen in PSH's gym on the night of the sockhop canteen.

"specials" are Twirp Week, College Night

"I walked him to class, carried all his books, and then I asked him for a date tonight."

Was this girl being forward—too aggressive? Not on your life! It was Twirp Season!

The word "Twirp" comes from the initials of "The Woman Is Requested To Pay." During Twirp Season the girls borrow the masculine prerogative, and for one week any boy becomes "legal game." This year's Twirp Week, November 10-14, ended with a "Roaring Twenties" Dance in the cafeteria.

The fun of Twirp Week was only one aspect of fall. College Night and the NHS induction reminded us that fall was also a time for academic pursuits. Seniors of scholastic excellence were recognized at the fall induction ceremony of the National Honor Society, and the potential college students of PSH had many of their questions answered when they attended informative sessions with representatives from their favorite colleges on College Night. Among the colleges represented were Hiram, Antioch, Bowling Green, and Kent.

Candlelighters Linda Sullivan and Lois Wadzuk perform their duties as a part of the NHS induction ceremonies.

Believe it or not, this is 1959! Sue Heavilon and Irene Flak are dressed for the "Roaring Twenties" Twirp dance.

The auditorium lobby hums with activity just before the noon movie, as students buy tickets and flock in to watch.

PSH-ers find each school day is both a Daily hundreds of PSH-ers race to the cafeteria, crowd into line, and wait patiently to buy a delicious hot lunch.

Lunch period? "My favorite class!" say some. And it's the high point of the day for all of us.

It's a period we wait for all morning. No matter when we eat, fifth, sixth, or seventh period, we find that the class immediately before it is apparently the longest one in the day as we wait for the bell in a spirit of anticipation.

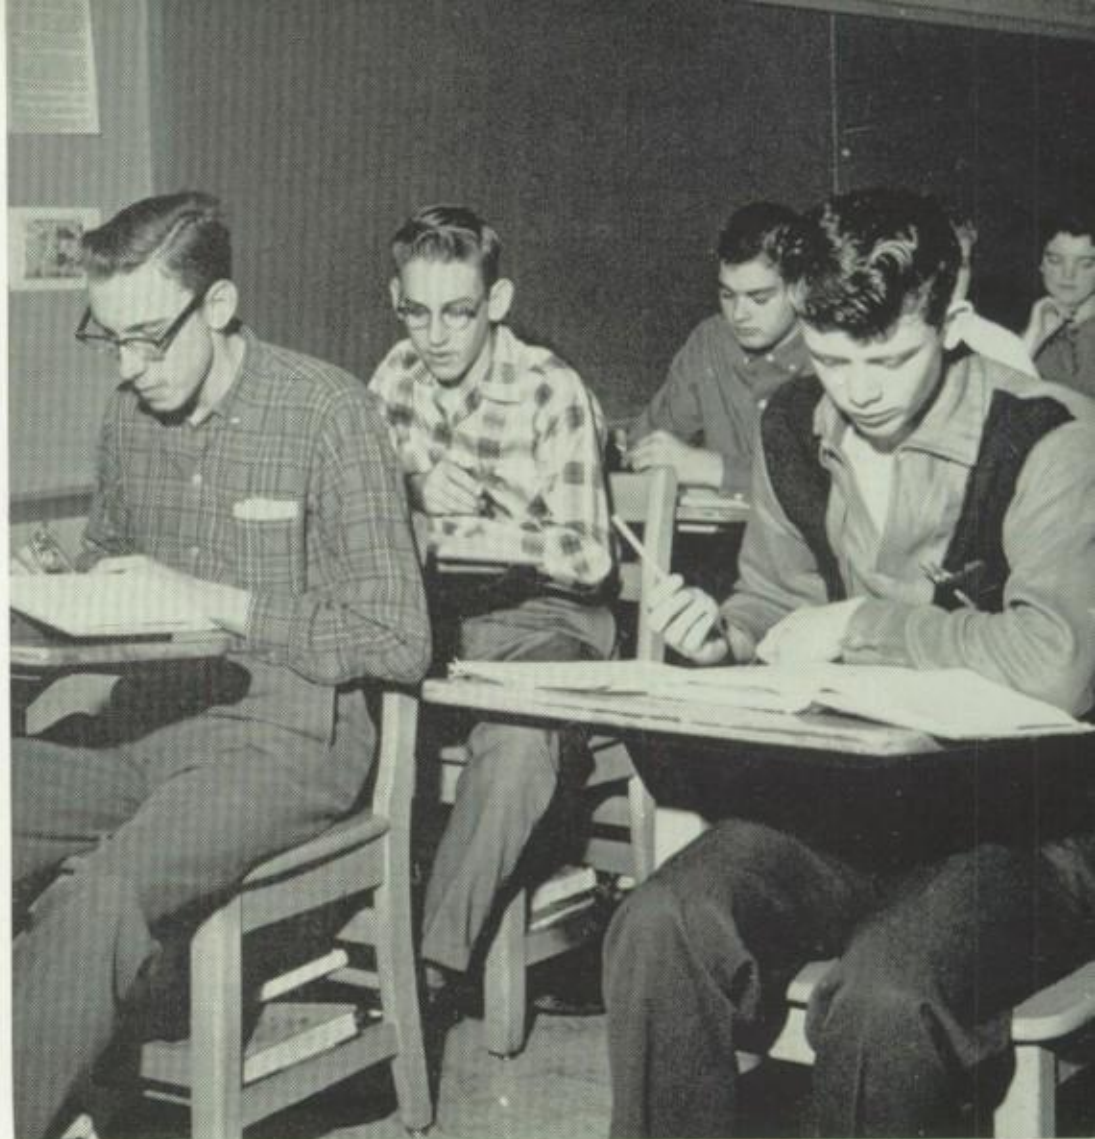

At last we are free, if only for forty-five minutes. We make very hurried expeditions to our lockers, then dash down to the cafeteria in order to get a place in the seemingly endless lunch line. Next we find our table and our friends. We sit down to compare notes on the morning's events, fend off an occasional chair snatcher, practice sales resistance on Boosters, and eat our lunch.

We have a choice of things to do in the free half of our lunch period. We could watch part of a noon movie; we could attempt the hike to the rec room; we could simply study in the library. But soon lunch period is over, and we hear the bell reminding us that it's time for class.

Forty minutes is a significant length of time to all of us at PSH. Those forty-minute units that compose our school days are probably the most important parts of our "student life": they are our class periods, our time to learn.

Some of our classes are quiet: we recall the concentration we found vital in math or science courses, and stricken silences accompanying any unexpected tests. Some of them are more lively: we remember chatty art classes, spirited debates in guidance, or the adventure of our first try at parallel parking. Some classes are noisy: we think of the clatter of typewriters, the pleasant hum of sewing machines, or perhaps an alarming crash that tells us we've broken a test tube. Sometimes the noise is more directed: we choir, band, and orchestra members know this very well.

The five-minute breaks between our classes are equally important to us. They afford us time to stop at our lockers, pause at the drinking fountain, check the WTIP bulletin board, greet a few friends, and thread our way through PSH's perpetual traffic jam. And we arrive just in time for our next class, again ready to learn.

Compasses, protractors, and similar unusual instruments come into use as Mr. Hick's geometry class takes a test.

Anxious faces are turned toward the basket as a few of the Parma Redmen devote all their attention to the game.

In this game, as in all of those involving Parma's basketball team, fast action and exciting happenings prevail.

Basketball games and Christmas festivities

Plagued by increasing appetites, though with undiminished high spirits, basketball fans stop for refreshments.

PSH's gym is rafter-high with students, teachers, parents, and other interested citizens—all basketball fans.

Winter—a dismal stretch of nasty weather? Not at PSH where the climate had its compensations.

For one thing, winter meant Christmas, a holiday for which we waited eagerly and prepared extensively. Weeks before Christmas, PSH was already in the mood. Choir members went around humming Christmas music. Artistic PSH-ers prepared for the display contest. Decorations mysteriously appeared in classrooms. Girls angled for "holidates." We all planned to do enormous amounts of schoolwork during the two weeks of our vacation. Yet almost before we knew it, the holidays were over and we were back at school.

Another consolation of winter was basketball. We remember piling into PSH on chilly evenings, getting our hands stamped, and settling down in the gym to watch some fast action as the Redmen tried again to out-dribble, out-pass, and primarily to outscore their adversaries. Although the Redmen's fortunes varied, we cheered our hardest regardless of the game's outcome. And afterwards we danced away what energy we had left at a record hop in the cafeteria—a fine sequel to a game and a gay way to liven a chilly night.

Dramatics students occupy the spotlight

Roman senator Gallio's home is disrupted by some violent action as the senior play, "The Robe," nears its climax.

Stage crew members Marv Nevans and Bill Anderson help "set the stage" for one of PSH's dramatic presentations.

There was magic in the air—a tense excitement pervaded the atmosphere and touched everyone in sight. Actors, Stage Crew members, make-up people, and prompters filled the dressing rooms and the back stage. A few actors stood in the wings waiting nervously, some silently mouthing their lines, others merely gazing into space.

Behind each stage production at PSH were many people doing various tasks. Thespians, Masquers, Soc N' Buskin, and drama classes were the training grounds for the aspiring actors and directors. Members of the Stage Crew were "giants behind the scenes," doing all the necessary technical work. The publicity committee worked hard before the performance and then came to watch their predictions of a successful production become realities. The performance was a product of the combined efforts of each of these groups, and each derived the satisfaction of a job well done.

Whether the play was "The Robe," "Don Quixote," or "The Wall," the thrilling excitement before the curtain rose could only be compared to the feeling of satisfaction when the applause lingered long after the curtain closed.

Is this a demonstration of poor table manners? No, it's just a pie-eating competition at the All School Party.

PSH takes time for fun at the All School

Several prom-goers stop at the refreshment table for a bite to eat and a moment's rest at the 1959 Junior Prom.

We snickered as we watched a line-up of boys valiantly trying to eat pies "no-handed." We entered a pop-drinking contest and succeeded only in sloshing pop all over ourselves, the person next to us, and the floor. We tried, usually in vain, to toss embroidery hoops around the necks of "Dirty George" and his fellow ducks. Then we flung beanbags at a wooden clown to win leis. And where did we do all this? At the All School Party, a Student Council-sponsored affair. This unique event also featured a dance in the cafeteria, a fortune teller, and a variety show including, among other things, a chorus line of five "bewitching beauties" from Boys Leaders.

By May the All School Party had become history, but then came the senior and junior proms. We "could have danced all night"—and did just that at these gala dances, one held in the Hotel Cleveland and one in the Hotel Statler. We found that the proms, finished off by picnics the next day, were the crown jewels of "the Queen's" year.

"Personality plus" spotlights Mr. and Miss

For one evening, the new library becomes the lounge of a New York hotel for the senior dance, "Manhattan Skyline."

Still a little stunned by the news of their election are John Holden and Veronica Dempsey—Mr. and Miss PSH.

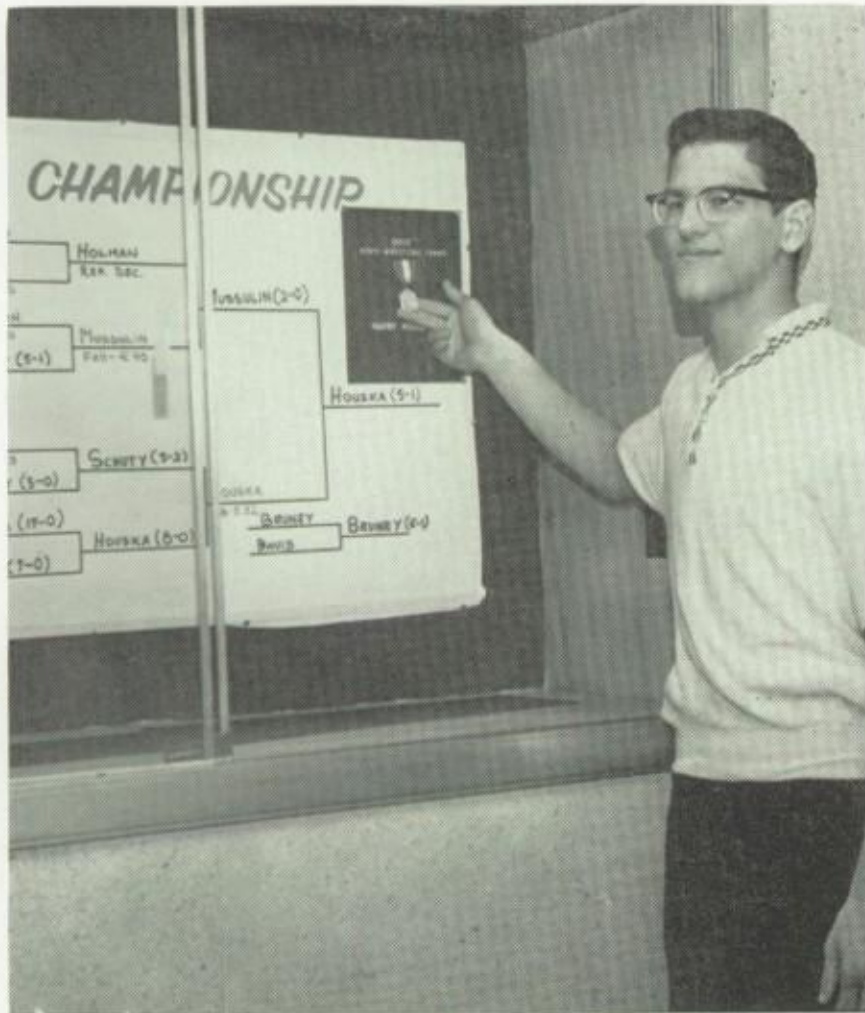

A certain glow was in the air. It was a shimmer of excitement; it was a glow of anticipation; it was a feverish blur of activity as hurried preparations were made. It was a starry look in the eyes of girls as they discussed their new dresses or daydreamed about their dates; it became a worried gleam when transferred to the eyes of their escorts, who wondered momentarily if they could finance the affair. And this glow was an unmistakable signal that a class dance was near.

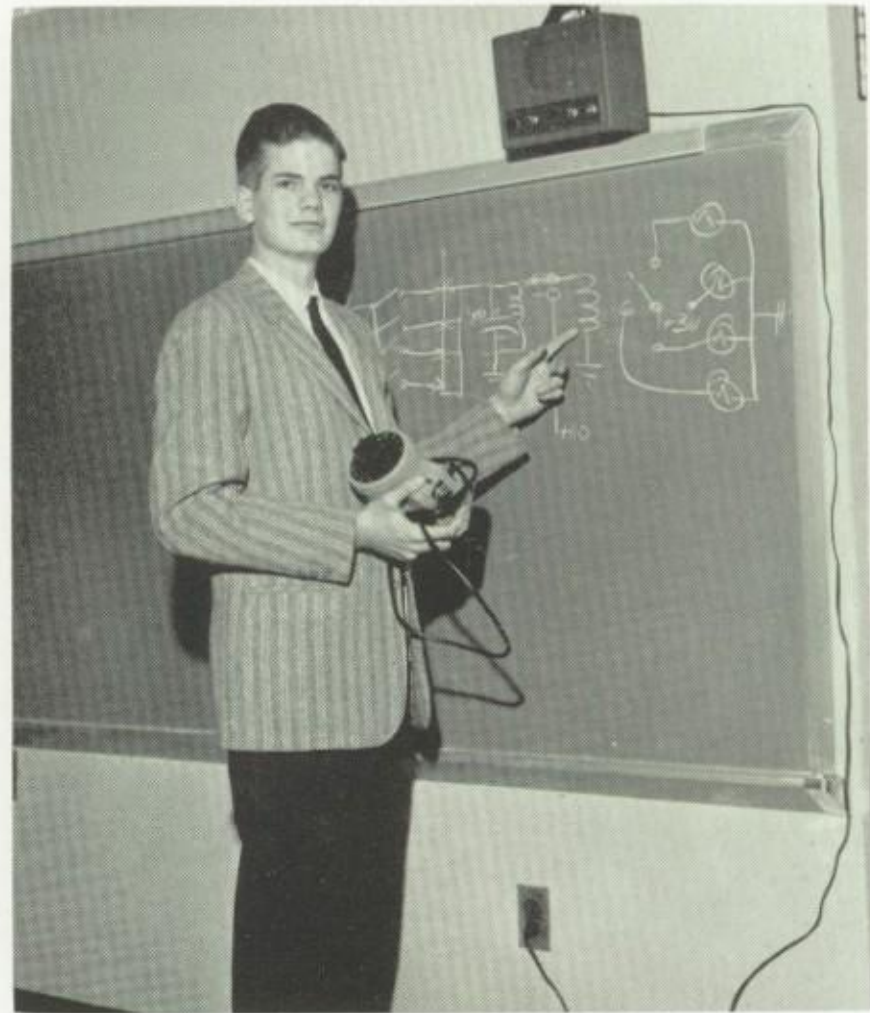

Mysteriously transformed into a plush New York hotel, the cafeteria was the locale for "Manhattan Skyline" on the evening of January 30. Girls in fluffy new dresses danced with their dates to the music of Jim Becker's orchestra as worries about school were forgotten.

Another glow—that of a sparkling personality—was saluted in Top Teen Week in February. Outstanding PSH-ers were honored for personality and leadership; selected as exemplary of both were Mr. and Miss PSH, John Holden and Ronnie Dempsey.

During SCM campaign week, underclass PSH-ers take a fling at politics and cheer for their chosen candidates.

John Holden and his campaign manager, Jim Zavocky, congratulate Tom Good and Peggy Taliak on Tom's election.

Underclassmen elect an SCM and seniors

Who would be Parma's Student City Manager for 1959-60? This question was a topic for plenty of spirited discussion and much lively speculation last spring as election time crept upon us. The field, we soon found, was narrowed down to two candidates, Tom Good and John Holden.

And then it was campaign week! We considered the candidates thoroughly as their campaign committees slaved patiently over ways to present the candidates' good points or simply attract the undecided. We chose sides, we proudly carried signs, and we looked like members of some Badge-of-the-Day Club as we advertised our choices in PSH's halls. And we found that it was fun!

Yet, however fiercely we stood for Good or held out for Holden, we were all sure that either one would be a suitable SCM. So we cast our votes, relaxed, and compared legends about previous campaigns that had been decided by only "four votes!" When the results came, we were satisfied: the Student City Manager we had elected was Tom Good.

"Not the sunset, but the dawn." This motto, chosen by the Senior Class of 1960, was a familiar thought to us as time began to run out in the school year. For all of us, it was indeed not an end, but a beginning in many ways.

The entire year was a beginning for the sophomores. Becoming accustomed to PSH with its crowded halls, changing scenes, and many activities was a fascinating but full-time job.

Juniors, having found their way around, were now fully accustomed to PSH and looked forward to assuming their places as seniors.

And seniors had mixed memories of their last year at PSH. They sadly recalled term papers and trig tests, but their memories were primarily of the good times they had had—football games, dances, class plays, All School Parties, and many more. But as they were looking back, they were also looking forward and planning their futures.

Four years of college lay ahead for some; some planned more immediate careers. But all saw the unlimited possibilities ahead and realized that, despite their regrets about leaving PSH, this end too was a beginning—perhaps the best one of all.

PARMA SENIOR HIGH ALMA MATER

Parma High School, we place you

Far supreme and over all.

Students to you do decree

Honor and fidelity.

Our pride in you is great,

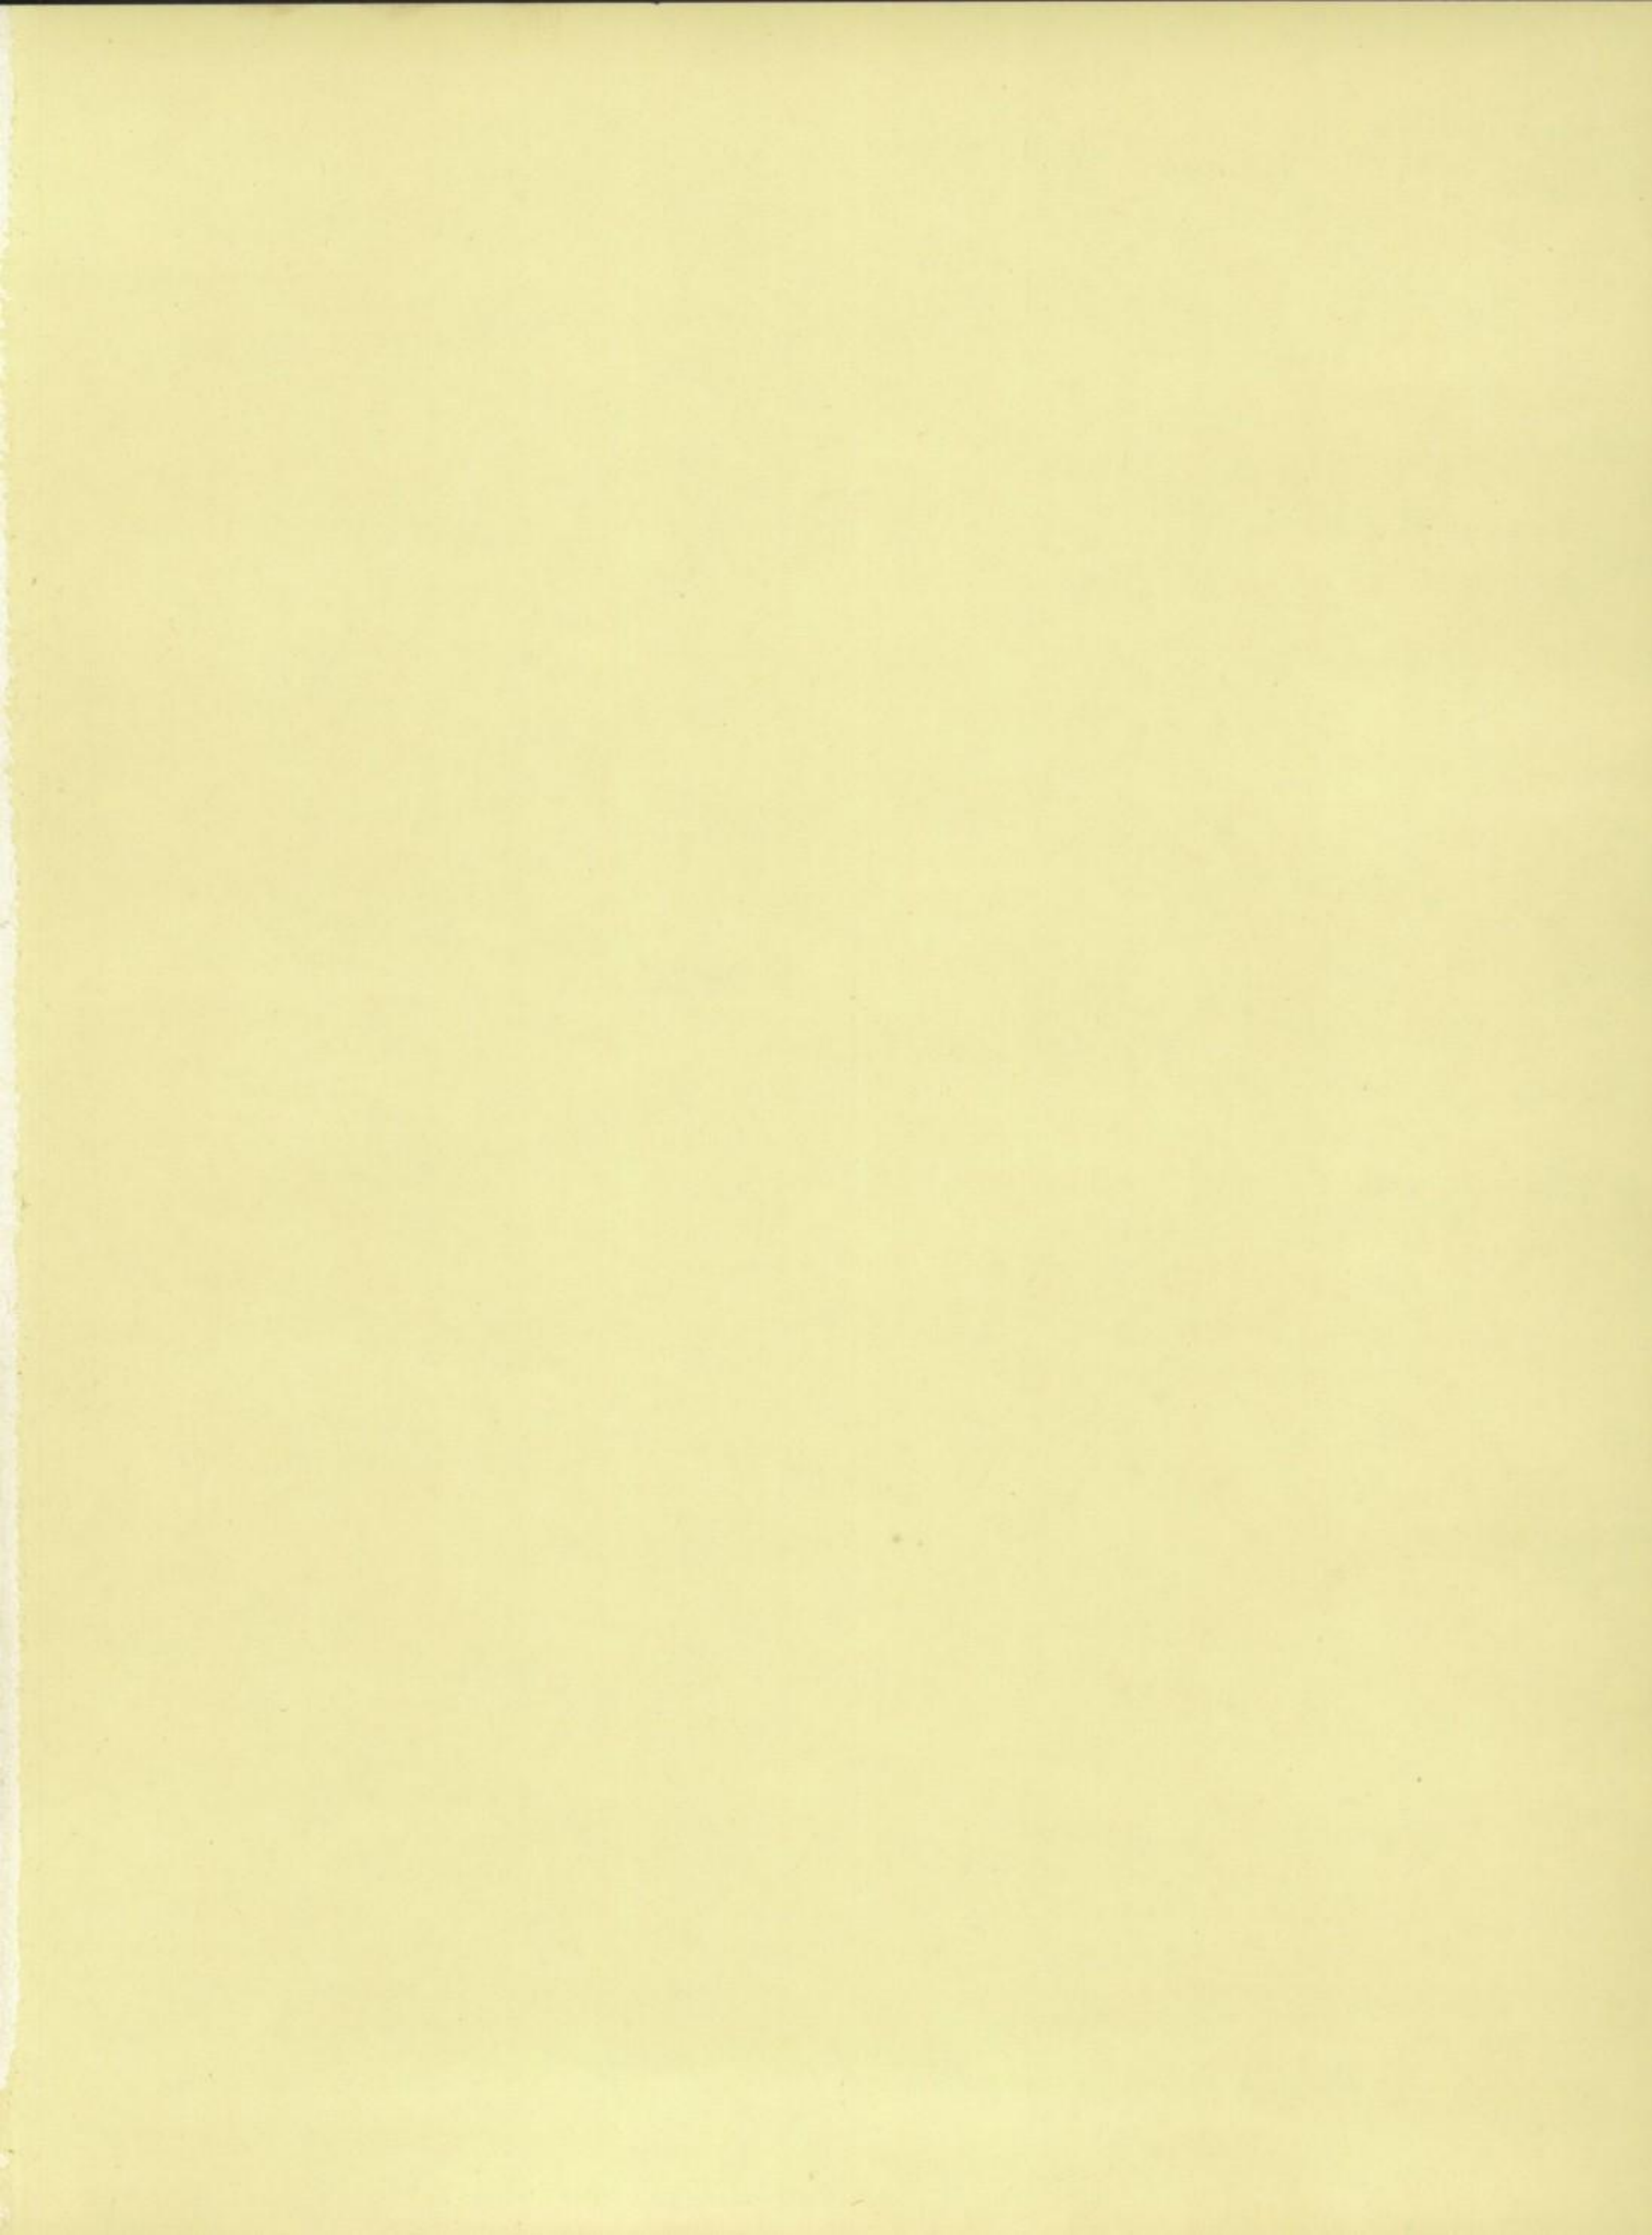

Your name must never, never fall.

Parma High, our promise is Loyalty, eternally.

can't andy,
our year has come to a close, finally; but always will I remember the fun and swell times we had in Spanish homeroom and lunch in our senior year.
I have even times we didn't always agree, and boys I said that you didn't like (?); but all-in-all, I'm very glad we're friends and hope we will be for a long time to come. He best to you in college, and when you make that first-million let me know!
As always your friends,
Many more
B.P. Don't forget that candid pose on page 180.
Ahem!

Sandy, it's been a real pleasure to have known you this long. Remember all the hornings we spent on the you are now. May your future be happy. May you achieve your goal.
As Always,
Lara Lee

Dandy,
Boy we've sure
had a lot of fun
together in this class.
and all over others.
I'll never forget all the
the 9th grade we ever since a couple of goons had them, huh!
It's going to be hard to say since good-bye and I sure will every day.
seeing your smiling face every day.
marking it. cheered up many a day.
Best of luck in every thing you do is the future. I'm sure be a thing yando.
success on the future in keep your love may God Bless you and keep your love
p.s. Try to get in touch with me sometime
